The President's Message

Greetings from Arizona:

We are off to a good start for 2007 with good personnel and support for our clubs and membership in the home office, great committees and great people chairing the committees leading the effort to achieve our goals. If you have an interest or ideas in any area addressed by our committees, be sure to touch base with a committee member or the chair as they are always looking for constructive ideas and working members.

Scholarship committee chairman Tom Wilten is accepting applications for scholarships from your clubs for college students majoring in plant sciences or horticulture. The applications for your club to submit are on the web site under SCHOLARSHIPS.

I know many of you have had and are having great experiences and ideas that would be of interest to those of us who are trying to grow better gardens. Please share those experiences with us through the NEWSLETTER.

Arbor Day is celebrated throughout America, November through May, with most states having their Arbor Day in March or April. Many of our clubs will be participating in tree plantings and all of us will be getting ready for our Spring and Summer gardening. I hope you have a fulfilling Arbor Day, whenever it is in your part of our great country, as well as a productive and beautiful garden this year.

Reminder, mark your calendars for July 12-14 for the convention in Rockford, Ill.

How Does Your Garden Grow?

DALLAS LAUNCHES SURVEY OF CITY'S TREES

Officials Eager for More Greenery and Shade

Monday, September 18, 2006

By Allen Houston, The Dallas Morning News

Dallas' concrete jungle turns many residents green with envy for cities with more trees and nature.

But Dallas, with its endless highways and strip malls, has rooted itself in an effort to bury its reputation for cold steel and glass.

In short, the city wants to become a tree hugger.

In December, the City Council created the Urban Forest Advisory committee. In August, it hired Walter Passmore as the city's first urban forester. Now, the advisory committee is raising funds for a major initiative: an inventory of all city trees, public and private. The tree census, expected to start in January, could cost up to $1 million.

The moves signal a cultural shift in a city not known for promoting an eco-friendly scene. They may also bring Dallas up to speed with cities such as Fort Worth and Houston.

"Compared to other large cities we've been in the stone ages when it comes to how we take care of our trees, but we're finally starting to catch up," said Steve Houser, chairman of the advisory committee.

The region surrounding Houston completed its first tree inventory two years ago, tallying 663 million trees whose replacement costs was valued at more than $205 billion. Fort Worth and Austin have done similar surveys.

Dallas' tree inventory would Dallas' tree inventory would document the varieties of trees and their conditions. It would also identify areas needing trees and what varieties have been over-planted.

"Trees should be considered part of the infrastructure in the same way as our streets and sewers," said Michael Hellman, a park planner with the Dallas Park and Recreation Department. "When managed properly, a tree's value increases in time. No other city infrastructure does that."

Mr. Houser, an arborist, has been a tree advocate in Dallas for more than a decade.

Shift in attitudes

"Five years ago, if I were to have approached council and talked to them about hiring an urban forester and performing a tree inventory, they would have laughed in my face," he said. "The philosophy was that 'We're pro-development, and we don't want anything to do with trees.'"

Bob Seaman, horticulturalist and advisory committee member, said that in the past, a disconnect existed locally regarding trees' benefits.

"Ten years ago, the main perception was that trees only served an aesthetic purpose," Mr. Seaman said. "Now we're more aware of the many positive effects that they have on air quality, our health, keeping our city cooler and the bottom line of economics in the city."

Mayor Laura Miller has been promoting tree efforts since her days representing Oak Cliff on the City Council. "There's been a huge shift in how the city of Dallas perceives trees," Ms. Miller said. "In the past we thought nothing about destroying trees in the name of economic development."

Other cities' progress

Some large cities have surpassed Dallas on the forestry front.

Fort Worth hired its first urban forester in the 1920s, and its first city charter included an ordinance forbidding hitching a horse to a public tree, said Melinda Adams, Fort Worth's city forester.

Fort Worth's Urban Forestry program has a neighborhood tree-planting program, a tree farm and a citizen forestry program, and it trains city crews on how to properly maintain public trees.

"People are just now beginning to see the big picture with climate changes, and it's only going to become more profound as time passes," Mrs. Adams said. "Our city urban forestry programs will become even more important." Managing Dallas' trees has fallen to Mr. Passmore, who just moved to the city after 14 years as a community assistant forester in Mississippi.

Dallas received funds to hire an urban forester with a National Forest Service grant and will pay the rest of his salary from park department funds. For now, Mr. Passmore, with no dedicated staff and no budget, will try to establish an urban forest department. "The big challenge is making residents understand how significant the tree resources in the city are and how to utilize them best for us," he said. "There's 364 square miles of land for us to manage. That provides us with huge opportunities."

Satellites and volunteers do the counting

The city will use satellite technology to count trees and determine their species. In heavily urban sections, volunteers will drive city streets and alleys with handheld computers to input data.

To speed up the count, Mr. Houser wants to start a citizen forester program that would educate residents on forestry in return for helping with the survey.

The Houston-area tree inventory used GPS technology and volunteers. The city has started a second, more comprehensive examination of neighborhood trees.

"Before the first inventory, everything we did was on a reactive basis," said Victor Cordova, Houston's city forester. "Now we know which trees are likely to fall over, we know which ones are dead, we know which areas need more trees."

As Dallas moves forward, Mr. Houser believes the city has finally decided it wants a greener identity.

"I'm seeing council members who finally want to do more than leave concrete and strip malls," he said. "The current city officials seem like they are interested in leaving a living legacy for their children."

Ms. Miller is one of those officials embracing trees. She started climbing trees with Mr. Houser four years ago and has even entered a couple tree-climbing competitions.

She recalled when she and Mr. Houser climbed a large tree over White Rock Lake last winter. "It was quite magical," she said. "We sat in a tree overlooking out over the lake. It gives you quite a different perspective about things."

What Houston Discovered

The following are findings from Houston's Regional Forest Report, released last year. The study by the U.S. Forest Service and the Texas Forest Service covered an eight-county region surround-ing Houston.

- The replacement cost of the region's 663 million trees is valued at more than $205 billion.
- Trees store $721 million worth of carbon.
- Trees generate $456 million worth of environmental benefits annually.
- Trees save $131 million in residential energy costs and help lower power plant emissions each year. Houston's trees remove more than 60,000 tons of air pollution per year.

TREES ARE COOL

By The National Wildlife Federation

According to the USDA, the cooling effect of a healthy tree is equal to 10 room-size air-conditioners operating 20 hours a day. Planting trees in our cities will absorb 33 million tons of carbon dioxide every year and save $4 billion in energy costs.

PROPOSED BYLAWS CHANGE

The Board of Directors has proposed the following Bylaws change: Article VIII.4. -- Remove from Bylaws and add to the Standing Rules and renumber the affected Sections.

Article VIII.4. of the Bylaws requires, among other things, that the annual meeting of the Board shall be held the first Friday and Saturday of November. These dates are not always convenient for the Board members. By moving this section to the Standing Rules the meeting date can be changed as necessary to accommodate more of the members of the Board and thus increase attendance.

The TGOA / MGCA bylaws may be accessed by going to the website: www.tgoa-mgca.org, going to the Members Only section and clicking on the Red Book.

Ballots will be coming out soon.

A Year in Review: the Gardeners Club of Green Bay, Wisconsin

By Shirley A. Winnes

A rather unusual situation presented itself in 2006 for the Gardeners Club of Green Bay. With a membership of more than 80, no one would commit to being our president. Our officers of vice president, secretary, and treasurer were filled with conscientious people who carried out their responsibilities dependably. So each month, a volunteer came forward from the membership to preside over our monthly meetings until a member who already served as president from 1997-99 consented to complete 2006 as president.

As always, there were interesting and successful programs for each meeting. We celebrated the retirement of one of our members after 30 years of serving as our county extension agent. The retiree, Paul Hartman, has also served as an advisor to our club, and he will be serving as our president for 2007.

A successful spring plant sale was held in May in partnership with our local Master Gardeners. Jersey Knight asparagus crowns were sold—1,000 of them with customer orders made already for 2007! Ten members participated in the TGOA-MGCA national convention in Spartanburg in April. Donations were made to assist the Green Bay Botanical Garden, to assist the perennial gardens at the local county extension grounds, and to a local foundation, which sponsors horticulture scholarships. Several members participated in the local county fair winning numerous ribbons and cash awards.

Two fall weigh-ins were held at the farmers market to award prizes for large produce, sunflowers, and pumpkins. Youth sunflower and pumpkin awards were presented at an annual harvest banquet held in November. Three Silver Trowel awards were given to local gardeners with a beautiful residential garden, a commercial garden, and an individual award for excelling in horticultural endeavors. Our club sponsored a garden bus trip.

All of these activities would not happen without devoted members who volunteer their time, energy, and expertise serving as officers, committee members, or just plain “digging in the dirt” by helping out at the county extension grounds, the botanical garden, and/or plant rescues.

DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME STARTS IN MARCH 2007

By Frank Mitch, Web Site Committee Chair and Webmaster

Some of you may be surprised to learn that Daylight Saving Time will start earlier this year and end later in the Fall. Congress revised the law last year to specify these dates:

Daylight Saving Time begins: March 11, and ends: November 4, 2007

Many computers are set for the previous dates as far as automatic change is concerned. You all will have three options to get the correct times on your computers this year:

1. Make the changes manually: Click on the time shown on the right end of the bottom task bar and make the changes on or after the correct dates or whenever needed. PC computers prior to WIN XP will need to have the manual changes, probably Macs also.

2. Download the Microsoft download fix for your WIN XP Service Pack2 PC computers.

3. New Computers with the new Vista Operating System will handle the time changes automatically.

The Microsoft fix is a little more work but one time only (until the next vote in Congress): Go to this website page to download the MS WIN XP update and read the instructions: <http://www.microsoft.com/downloads/details.aspx?familyid=2D0ECBB C-FE8F-4BFC-8667-C1D46662B5 B7&displaylang=en>

Or search with this in Google: Microsoft KB928388 (It will go to the above page) Brief description: Installing this update enables your XP computer to automatically adjust the computer clock on the correct date in 2007 due to revised Daylight Saving Time laws in many countries.

Have fun and call your favorite computer guru if you have a problem.

Retirees Help Teach Gardening To The Disabled

By Azra Hoqqie, Staff writer, Times Union, Albany, NY

ALBANY -- It was at a luncheon for his retired men's fraternity that Al Miller heard about volunteering at the Center for Disability Services. The speaker was Jerry Fitzgerald, the center's executive director back then, and his message inspired Miller to get involved.

For 20 years following his career at the state Department of Taxation and Finance, Miller used his love of gardening as a way to help people with cerebral palsy and other disabilities.

On Wednesday mornings, he and other volunteers help people at the center on 700 South Pearl St.

"We teach gardening techniques, or play plant bingo with them or watch gardening videos," said Miller, a longtime member of the Men's Garden Club of Albany.

"They are pretty good at following directions," he said, "but it's not easy for all. One of them needs sign language. Some are not coordinated enough and we have to take their hand to assist in mixing soil to the right consistency, planting seeds in pots and watering them. Come spring, those seedlings will be transplanted into the ground.

The volunteers are participants in Gardening from the Heart, a national program started in Kansas City, MO.

The volunteers built raised beds so that the people who use wheelchairs could get close enough for the hands-on labor.

"Come late summer, we harvest," said Miller, adding that consumers take home a bag of what ever is harvested that week.

Bill Krug, who had a farm near Everett Road and donated a greenhouse to the center, is one of a half-dozen garden club members working with 17 men and women there in two groups growing such flowers as geraniums, marigolds, petunias and dianthus and peppers, tomatoes and other vegetables and chives, rosemary and basil, among other herbs.

"We have already started growing geraniums and will have a plant sale before Mother's Day," he said.

Note: Al Miller is a member and past president of the Albany MGC. Bill Krug is also a member.

About The Editor

Who works in the office at headquarters in Johnston, Iowa?

The Administrative Assistant and Editor at TGOA / MGCA headquarters is AJ (Annie) Freeman. AJ has been married for 28 years, has two stepsons, and eight grandchildren.

In February 2002 she retired from the Iowa Army National Guard with 24 years service; the last 18 years were as a Federal employee.

Positions held included Military Police, Career Manager, and Supply Clerk. As a federal employee she performed clerical duties as the State Personnel Security Manager for the Guard.

In the early 1990s AJ spent over six years as a police reservist in Urbandale, Iowa.

After spending just over two years of her retirement sitting at the kitchen table playing on her laptop and gaining weight, she decided it was time to get a job and start getting back into shape. When TGOA/MGCA's national treasurer, Steve Bush, offered her a part-time position at headquarters in the fall of 2004, she accepted.

Thank you for your support, AJ

“Greatest Generation”

Written by Joseph Alessi, Jr., The Men’s Garden Club of Youngstown, Ohio, December 2006

Members of the ‘Greatest Generation’ helped to free the world by determining to do all that was necessary to defeat Axis armies.

Completing that monumental task, they joined with that same determination to build gardening clubs across the nation. Their zeal soon carried over and the need for a national organization presented itself and burgeoned into what is now the national TGOA/MGCA. But for how long will we survive a dwindling membership?

Numbers are being reduced for reasons of deaths, dues and dissatisfaction of one thing or another. As membership decreases we must do more than just thank our friends of the ‘Greatest Generation’. It was they that gave us our local clubs and the national affiliation to satisfy a need that remains today.

They passed the torch for us to continue solving the problems today. Beginning on the local level, an increasing membership could eliminate many problems. The rising national membership would provide additional minds with leadership abilities to help with problem solving.

What is the first thing each of us could do this minute to help? Every month invite a different guest to your next meeting or event. It’s as simple a thing to do as shaking a person’s hand.

Talk about the attributes of your club, there are thousands of gardeners passing within an arms length that are eager to join if only someone would ask. Be the first in your club to qualify for the Spade Award in 2007!

Thank the ‘Greatest Generation’ by building on their efforts and the need to have garden clubs to join around the country as they did for us.

Near and Dear to My Heart

Thought For The Year

In case we find ourselves starting to believe all the anti-American sentiment and negativity, we should remember England's Prime Minister Tony Blair's words during a recent interview.

When asked by one of his Parliament members why he believes so much in America, he said: "A simple way to take measure of a country is to look at how many people want in, and how many people want out."

Only two defining forces have ever offered to die for you:

1. Jesus Christ
2. The American G.I.

One dies for your Soul.....
the other for your Freedom.
